Artist Statement

My subject matter is travelling to exotic regions of the world to explore cultures, wild nature, and their abstract details. All kinds of humans races have a special beauty and a unique and special look. Most of my portraits have a striking cut.

I have a lovely fascination for social projects in remote areas around the world, which ensures that I push the boundaries of my creativity. Completing my work full of passion and incredibly positive energy, is one of my highest priorities. I realize different people have different perspectives, this keeps me humble, with less judgment and with much more compassion for taking care of our Planet Earth. All kinds of life exists in our world and the people who view my work can feel the same emotions I had in the moment the photograph was taken.

Most people are worried about money and material things, perhaps in maintaining a perfect body, but it's important to remind ourselves how important keeping a balance is. Each individual is different, like landscapes, yet this does not mean that one is better than the other.

Pamella Herpio

One of my missions is to portray in my work the raw, the original, the androgenic and the exotic landscapes. We must see how beautiful and significant they are, which would depict the changes we experience in our lives and in our Planet. This would encourage us to celebrate and give thanks in all seasons of life. My soul decides for my body where it will go to photograph so we can later show the world its own beauty.

My vision is to create this spirit of compassion, protection, love and respect in each individual who will see my work. I consider all of my senses, creativity and intuition in my work, especially the responses of other people when they are connecting with the photographs. It's a subtle exchange of energy which continues in eternal synergy.

The deconstruction of nature, portraits, bodies and culture are what keep me creative in generating original angles, artistic interposition and deep meaning in each series and exhibition.
